Canada joins call for Tiananmen reckoning

'Public accounting' sought on 20th anniversary of crackdown

Canada joined with the United States on Thursday to demand a public accounting by Beijing for those killed in Tiananmen Square 20 years ago and do more to improve human rights.

"We hope that they will be able to examine these events in an open and transparent fashion — including the public accounting of those killed, detained or missing," Foreign Minister Lawrence Cannon said in a written statement.

"China has made signifi-prove human rights, there is more that can be done," Cannon said.

China denounced as crude meddling a demand for similar accounting by U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton on Wednesday.

Clinton called on China to release all those still imprisoned in connection with the protests, to stop harassing those who took part and to begin a dialogue with the victims' families.

Tanks rolled into Tiananmen Square on June 4, 1989, to crush pro-democracy protesters but the Communist Party has never released a death toll.

Obama addresses Muslims

CAIRO U.S. President Barack Obama called for a "new beginning" in ties between Washington and the Islamic world in a speech addressing the world's more than one billion Muslims from Cairo.

In his keynote speech, Obama said he did not want U.S. troops to stay in Iraq or Afghanistan forever and offered mutual respect in seeking to resolve differences with longtime foe, Tehran.

"We meet at a time of tension between the United States and Muslims around the world — tension rooted in historical forces that go beyond any current policy debate," Obama said in the address that included quotes from Islam's holy book, the Qur'an.

"I have come here to seek a new beginning between the United States and Muslims around the world, one based upon mutual interest and mutual respect," he said. "America and Islam are not exclusive, and need not be in competition."

"This cycle of suspicion and discord must end," he said.

Cops ask for help identifying suspect

Ottawa police are asking the public to help identify a man after a gas station in the 100 block of Montreal Road was robbed April 14. At about 11:44 p.m., a lone male entered a Petro-Canada station on Montreal Road, police said. Police said the suspect demanded money, and that the clerk believed he was armed with a handgun. Police are seeking a white male, five feet, eight inches tall with a medium build, a mustache and a partial beard.

Capital aims to be a green leader

NCC boss says the capital region is ready to inspire others in environmental practices

Sunny Side

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

The national capital could become the most eco-friendly region in the world, and the National Capital Commission is planning to lead the way with an "ambitious" new environmental strategy.

"I strongly believe that the capital region is ready to take on the challenge of becoming a leader of best environmental practices," NCC CEO Marie Lemay said Thursday. "We will lead by example in the hopes that we can inspire our partners, stakeholders and the public in making our capital greener."

Steve Blight, the NCC's director of environmental management and protection, said 2009 will be used as a baseline to set measurable targets.

"That's the main focus

"I strongly believe that the capital region is ready to take on the challenge of becoming a leader of best environmental practices."

Marie Lemay, NCC CEO

of this year's activities," he said. "We'll be measuring emissions during events and we'll be offsetting emissions that can not be eliminated."

In 2010, Canada Day will be carbon neutral, the NCC said. The NCC would increase tree planting or purchase of carbon offsets to counterbalance the CO2 emissions that cannot otherwise be eliminated.

By 2013, they hope to cut waste going to landfills from Canada Day, Winterlude and the Rideau Canal

Skateway events in half.

On a typical weekend day of skating on the canal, 1,505 kilograms of waste was produced by the public and commercial sector. More than three-quarters of that waste could have been recycled, according to a 2008 audit.

To promote biodiversity, the NCC plans to designate all of its high-value ecosystems and habitats as conservation lands by 2012.

Gatineau Park alone is home to nearly 100 plant species and 49 animal species that are at risk including 16 birds, 11 mammals, six fish, reptiles and one mollusk.

By 2013, all new buildings over 250 square metres on NCC lands will be certified Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design Gold.

Lemay said they are not expecting the environmental measures to lead to much increase to the operating budget.

For first time, breast cancer walk to benefit all women's cancers

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

CHARITY For the first time at the Weekend to End Breast Cancer this Saturday and Sunday, the 60 kilometres the 1,000 or so participants who will walk won't just benefit breast cancer.

This year, the fundraiser is directing funds to all women's cancers, said Ottawa Regional Cancer Foundation president and CEO Linda Eagen.

"It just made sense to do this," said Eagen earlier this week. "So many cancers are connected, and people have been asking us for it. I think it will be very welcome in the community."

Other details — like the money that's raised in the region stays in the region — won't change.

Even with economic difficulties, Eagen is confident that fundraising won't be too greatly affected.

"Right now, in eastern Ontario, 16 people hear the words 'you have cancer' from their doctors everyday."

Linda Eagen

Cancer is too important a cause touching too many people, she said.

Eagen, who will be walking for the fourth year this weekend, said people have been just as supportive as in the past.

The funds raised go to areas of the greatest concern and need in the Ottawa community, including reducing wait times, supporting the expansion of the Irving Greenberg Centre at the Queensway-Carleton Hospital and purchasing chemotherapy equipment so that patients living in smaller communities can receive care closer to home.

Many of the people walk because they have been touched by cancer, said Eagen.

"Right now, in eastern Ontario, 16 people hear the words 'you have cancer' from their doctors everyday," said Eagen.

"We're not a huge area, and when you think that many people have been affected by cancer, it's almost overwhelming."

While not everyone can walk this weekend, there are things the public can do to show their support, Eagen said.

This year, there will be a fan zone at Alta Vista and Riverside Saturday between 1:30 and 4:30 p.m., where people can gather to cheer on walkers as they pass.

Also new this year is a 2.5K and 5K walk for kids, organized after children asked what they could do to help.

The walk begins and ends at Rockcliffe Airbase.

Cultural camouflage

tracey.tong@metronews.ca

From the battlefield to the runway, from uniforms to ball gowns and skateboards, golf balls and adhesive bandages, camouflage is everywhere.

A new exhibit opening at the Canadian War Museum Friday celebrates the art and science of military concealment and its appropriation by popular culture and haute couture.

Developed by the Imperial War Museum in London, England and adapted by the museum here, the exhibit is the largest of its kind in North America, said Mark O'Neill, director general of the Canadian War Museum.

Because it spans military history, art and pop culture, Camouflage "is unique in that it will not only appeal to military enthusiasts, but to fashionistas," said O'Neill.

The collection, which includes 150 artifacts from 25 institutions, traces the history and development of military camouflage over the last century, from the earliest hand-painted attempts to hide and disguise weapons, positions and people during the First World War to the digitally generated patterns of today.

Camouflage, the subject of the Canadian War Museum's latest exhibit, has inspired fashion, said Diane Lees, director general of the Imperial War Museum in London, England.

"Camouflage was worn by all of the world's armies and in all of the world's wars," said Dr. Dean Oliver, director of research and exhibitions at the Canadian War Museum. "It's a form of defence, a form of attack, and a form of cultural expression."

"The exhibit contains many things you expect to find in the museum, like helmets and jackets, and images of dazzle-painted warships, but also things you don't expect to find, like gowns, skateboards, modern art and even a camouflage bikini," he said.

Big names in couture have also dabbled in camouflage wear. The exhibit features fashions by Philip Treacy, Christian Dior, Yves Saint Laurent, Jean Paul Gaultier and Jean-Charles de Castelbajac.

City hall welcomes garden

tim.wieclawski@metronews.ca

For Glen Noakes, a garden is like a doorway to Mother Earth, but living downtown, it's hard to find a patch of dirt to call his own.

Yesterday, Noakes was on hand for the groundbreaking of a new community garden at city hall, where he will be tending one of five plots.

"I'm really happy that the city is putting more energy for opening this, because the demand is so big," he said.

One of the plots will be designated for growing fresh vegetables for the Ottawa Food Bank. "The root of community gardens is to share with the rest of community," said Rosemary Taylor, from Nanny Goat Hill Community Gardens, which will help tend the gardens.

Ottawa residents Janet Thanda and Glen Noakes get their hands dirty.

There are 22 community gardens in Ottawa with wait lists of up to two years.

"The community garden at city hall will provide a community hub with an environmental and recreational focus for local residents," said Coun. Alex Cullen.

RESEARCH Scientists at the Ottawa Hospital Research Institute and the University of Ottawa have discovered a new way to stimulate muscle regeneration. Published Friday, the research — which paves the way for new treatments for debilitating conditions such as muscular dystrophy — states that a protein called Wnt7a increases the number of stem cells in muscle tissue, leading to accelerated growth and repair of skeletal muscle.

CRTC to leave new media alone

Canada's telecoms watchdog will continue to keep Internet and cellphone-based broadcasting services out of its regulatory reach, the agency announced on Thursday. The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission said it has decided to continue to exempt so-called "new media" broadcasters from its regulation in part because it fears that changing this stance would choke innovation.

Abdelrazik vindicated

Sudanese-born Canadian has right to enter Canada: Court

Abousfian Abdelrazik, stranded at the Canadian embassy in Sudan for more than a year, jumped up and down, laughed, and hollered "Thank you, thank you" in Arabic into the phone.

His Ottawa-based team of lawyers had just told him a Federal Court judge ordered the Conservative government to ensure the Canadian citizen's return to Canada within 30 days.

An hour later, an overjoyed Abdelrazik spoke excitedly by phone from Khartoum and said he could hardly believe his ears. "I cannot even describe my feelings."

"I have a reservation for the 12th of June and I hope to be on that flight."

Justice Russell Zinn ruled yesterday that the Sudanese-born man has a charter right to enter Canada, "his country of citizenship by choice."

He lives by himself with strangers while his immediate family, his young children, are in Montreal.

"He is as much a victim of international terrorism as the innocent persons whose lives have been taken by recent barbaric acts of terrorists," the judge wrote.

Although both the RCMP and CSIS eventually cleared Abdelrazik of terrorist ties, the federal government still balks at issuing the travel documents he needs to return.

Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon said he is on a UN no-fly list, and represents an unspecified security risk.

Reactor faces longer shutdown

REACTOR An aging Canadian nuclear reactor that makes a third of the world's medical isotopes may have to be shut down for longer than the three months initially forecast, the operator said Thursday.

The Chalk River reactor in eastern Ontario, run by government-owned Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., was taken out of service in May after it was discovered to be leaking a small amount of heavy water.

AECL officials said on Thursday that close examination of the reactor had discovered corrosion in several places and said there was no immediate or simple solution. AECL is now developing a plan on how to carry out the repairs, chief executive Hugh MacDiarmid told the House of Commons.

Chalk River

- Chalk River produces most of the isotopes distributed by MDS Nordion, a subsidiary of Canadian health sciences company MDS Inc.

The isotopes — used in medical tests and cancer treatments — are now in short supply.

Speech a 'good start'

U.S. President Barack Obama's speech to the Muslim world on Thursday was a "good start" towards a new U.S. policy in the Middle East, a spokesman for Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas said.

"His call for stopping settlement and for the establishment of a Palestinian state, and his reference to the suffering of Palestinians ... is a clear message to Israel that a just peace is built on the foundations of a Palestinian state with Jerusalem as its capital," said spokesman Nabil Abu Rdainah.

"President Obama's speech is a good start and an important step towards a new American policy," he said.

The Western-backed Abbas heads the Palestinian Authority, which has held sway only in the West Bank since Hamas Islamists took over the Gaza Strip in 2007.

"Speaking about a policy of pursuing a war against extremism and working towards two states for peoples on Palestinian lands is no different from the policy of his predecessor George W. Bush," Taha said.

Security remains first priority: Israel

MIDDLE EAST The Israeli government responded to Barack Obama's speech to Muslims on Thursday by saying it shared his hopes for Middle East peace but Israel's security interests remained paramount.

"We share President Obama's hope that the American effort heralds the opening of a new era that will bring an end to the conflict and to general Arab recognition of Israel as the nation of the Jewish people that lives in security and peace in the Middle East," an official statement said.

"Israel is committed to peace and will do all it can to expand the circle of peace while considering its national interests, first and foremost being security," it said after Obama's address in Cairo, Egypt.

The statement made no mention of Jewish settlements, which Obama said should not be expanded, nor Palestinian statehood.

Bomb theory played down

PLANE Intelligence services and security analysts who monitor extremist groups see nothing as yet to indicate foul play in the crash of Air France Flight 447.

Experts say the lack of a claim of responsibility and the absence of website chatter by guerrilla networks are pointers, albeit circumstantial ones, to an accident as the likely cause of the crash that killed 228 people.

"An attack is not the top theory at the moment," said Anthony Glee, director of Britain's Buckingham University Centre for Security and Intelligence Studies.

Authorities are baffled by how a modern plane could have plunged out of the sky without giving its team of three experienced pilots time to send a mayday call.

Lingering question

"The feeling is strange. A lot of people feel terrorism cannot be ruled out, but we have nothing to support this point," said Claude Moniquet of the European Strategic Intelligence and Security Centre. Air France and government ministers have said bad weather and turbulence were probably behind the disaster on the flight from Rio de Janeiro to Paris.

Fire kills 76 miners

Tragedy worst of its kind in South Africa

The bodies of 15 more illegal miners in South Africa were brought to the surface on Thursday, raising the death toll from a fire at a disused gold mine to at least 76, the mine's owners said.

Minister of Mining Susan Shabangu described the tragedy as the worst in recent memory at an illicit mine in South Africa, and vowed after a visit to the site to fight the kingpins behind the illegal gold mining syndicates.

Illegal mining

- Miners, most of them illegal immigrants, break concrete seals covering closed shafts. Sometimes they sneak past security or bribe guards and stay underground for months digging for gold before leaving by shafts kilometres away.

The unauthorized miners were killed after a fire they are thought to have started raged for days at the abandoned mine in the central Free State province where many disused mines hold enough deposits to attract illegal mining syndicates.

The previous death toll on Tuesday was 61.

Gold prices near record highs have made the risks taken by well-organized illegal mining syndicates even more worthwhile.

The miners died at Eland shaft near the town of Welkom, in a part of the mine that runs up to 1.4 kilometres deep. REUTERS

FLU Global health officials underestimated the risk that pig herds might be a source of new influenza strains, choosing instead to focus on the threat of bird flu, researchers in Mexico said Thursday. They analyzed samples from people infected with influenza A (H1N1), also known as swine flu, which has been confirmed in more than 19,000 people in 64 countries, killing about 120.

Peru finds human sacrifices left by Incas 600 years ago

SITE Researchers at an archaeological site in northern Peru have made an unusually large discovery of nearly three dozen people sacrificed 600 years ago by the Incan civilization.

The bodies, some of which show signs of having been cut along their necks and collarbones, were otherwise found in good condition, said Carlos Webster, who is leading excavations at the Chotuna-Chornancap camp.

The sprawling archaeological site is 20 kilometres outside the coastal city of Chiclayo, near the ancient tomb of Sipan, which was one of the great finds of the last century.

The heart versus head

Mona Eltahawy
Global View

George Bush could never have pulled it off. Give a speech that comfortably hopscoched between hot potato subjects, deftly shift from self-criticism to demanding the same of his audience and get at least 30 applause breaks from a mostly Muslim audience in Cairo, Egypt? Not in a million years.

How ironic that the middle name "Hussein," which the U.S. right wing viciously used to paint Barack Obama as a "secret Muslim," gave Obama what Bush never had — the benefit of the doubt of Muslims, if just for the 50 minutes of his speech.

But that middle name sparked quite the fight between my heart — so easily charmed by his eloquence and intelligence — and my head, which holds Obama to a higher standard. I know he knows better.

Here's the breakdown of my heart vs. my head:

As a Muslim in the U.S., my heart and head were united in delight that Obama highlighted the role of Muslim Americans. They bridge that divide of "us versus them" that so many of the Bush administration's policies and rhetoric inflamed.

Obama's acknowledgment of Palestinian suffering touched my heart but my head wanted to hear concern for civilian casualties and suffering in Pakistan and Afghanistan.

Obama's revulsion at torture reassured my heart but my head immediately asked why he didn't condemn torture in my beloved country of birth, Egypt — the host for his talk is a popular destination for renditions. Heart and head are furious that my country does America's dirty work.

Oh how he thrilled my heart by bringing up women's rights but why, oh why, head demanded, did he have to keep mentioning headscarves every time he spoke of Muslim women?

Yes education, small business loans and political involvement are all important for this Muslim woman's heart and head but I wish Obama had assured the women and girls of Afghanistan that their rights would not be sacrificed for the sake of a ceasefire or truce with the Taliban or other violent extremists.

Democracy greatly concerns both heart and head. Many Muslims around the world are upset with the U.S. because it supports dictators in many Muslim-majority countries such as Egypt, where Obama gave his speech, and Saudi Arabia where he began his Middle East visit.

So, Obama pleased heart with talk of the importance of the rule of law, freedom of expression, etc., but head wanted him to be as bold in condemning the repression of his hosts as he was in broaching those hot potato subjects that trouble the U.S. relationship with Muslims.

Clearly, Obama will keep heart and head busy.

Posters were meant to inform about World Naked Bike Ride

I set out in my neighbourhood in Hintonburg this week to put up posters for an upcoming event. I went to a couple of businesses that gladly accepted the posters on their community bulletin boards.

All the locations follow city bylaws. I did my short route up and down Wellington, and as I was retracing my steps, I found I was falling into an episode of the Twilight Zone or the movie Groundhog Day, where I had to live the same day over and over again. All the posters were gone!

In less than five minutes the posters had vanished.

The event is called World Naked Bike Ride. We will be having our fifth annual ride in Ottawa June 13.

The poster is not trying to sell anything. If a person is not able to freely disperse information about a community event, an event meant to promote road sharing and safety to cyclists, without being followed by someone, how can one feel safe in "our" neighbourhood. How can one feel like they are part of the neighbourhood if they are verbally excluded from it, forbidden to speak his or her voice, nor be allowed to be heard.

Messy people shouldn't ruin food, beverage choice

Re: Food, drink proposal tough to swallow (June 1)

In response to the letter Ms. Keatley wrote (June 3), for all the rest of the OC Transpo ridership (myself included) who are looking at a commute in excess of an hour, each way, every day, we hope OC Transpo does not impose such a ridiculous ban.

When you're spending that much time on the bus every day, the ride into work is frequently the only opportunity we have to drink our morning coffee. If Ms. Keatley is frustrated with the unclean habits of a few isolated individuals, then I agree with her.

But rather than have all the rest of us suffer through being on the bus for an hour without even water, she can politely tap them on the shoulder and ask them to clean up after themselves.

Unity is rare on our famously fractious city council, but last week it voted unanimously to install security cameras at the underpass at Rideau and Sussex in an effort to fight crime in the area. If all goes according to plan, council would like to have more city streets under 24/7 surveillance.

And why not? The city already has about 500 cameras monitoring municipal buildings and facilities like parks and pools. Taxis are also wired for video, and private security cameras are everywhere.

For those who balk at having their mere presence on certain streets recorded as potential evidence, provincial privacy regulations dictate some limits: Faces are blurred and can only be unblurred to identify the perpetrator of a crime, and the images can only be stored for a limited time.

But do cameras fight crime? Ottawa police are calling attention to a recent spike in bank robberies. Banks, of course, are already bristling with cameras.

And as for the supposed deterrent effect of cameras on crime, numerous studies show there isn't much.

In San Francisco, a report on its crime camera program this year found they had reduced non-violent thefts within 100 feet of the camera, but caused no overall reduction (thieves simply moved down the street). Car theft and violent crime were unaffected. So criminals were mildly inconvenienced while everyone else was treated as a suspect. San Francisco's response? Order more cameras.

Our crime rate is low and falling, but public fear of crime stubbornly resists statistics. This sells a lot of cameras, and installing them makes governments look busy. You could call it government by trick photography.

Ottawa's enthusiasm for surveillance also appears to be something of a one-way street. In January, a Canadian Newspaper Association audit of federal, provincial and municipal compliance with freedom of information laws awarded our secretive city hall a D+.

Last year, the city fought to conceal how much it paid consultant Gordon Hunter, Mayor Larry O'Brien's former campaign manager. Among the excuses given for withholding the information was the potential cost involved in spin and damage control once the information became public. That's right: The city was trying to save taxpayers money by keeping them in the dark about how much those taxpayers had paid Hunter ($80,454 over four months).

Perhaps a little more expense and effort could be devoted to helping Ottawa's citizens keep an eye on their government, and a little less to watching the citizens themselves.

Economy really on mend?

Mixed signals baffling both experts, ordinary Canadians

Is the economy actually getting better? The answer depends on whom you ask.

It is a classic bulls-versus-bears debate, fuelled by a flurry of mixed signals. While some financial luminaries have declared the worst of the crisis over, there is still considerable concern that those oft-cited "green shoots" ought to be viewed with suspicion.

In particular, economists' increasing reliance on double negatives — such as "less bad" or "less pessimistic" — have

about whether the economy is really on the mend.

For those utterly perplexed by all the Bay Street baffle-

David Rosenberg, chief economist and strategist with Gluskin Sheff and Associates, offers this assessment:

"The patient is out of the operating room, but it is not out of sick bay by a long shot."

He stresses that no one should mistake the recent rally in equities with a recovery in the real economy.

Jobs report

• With economists expecting a net loss of 42,500 jobs when Statistics Canada releases its May labour report Friday, the job market could remain dreadful for years.

Rosenberg argues there are four key ingredients driving the recession: Declines in "organic" personal income, sales, production and employment. Those factors have yet to bottom out and may not until next year.

But for now, the data are indeed "less bad" and should be interpreted that way. A recovery cannot materialize until growth rates turn positive on a "sustained basis," he said.

Bankruptcies up 33% in April

DATA Bankruptcies in Canada jumped in April from a year ago as more consumers gave up on paying their bills amid the country's first recession since the 1990s — and things are expected to get worse before they get better.

Consumer and business bankruptcies rose 33 per cent to 11,465 in April compared with the same month last year.

Surging consumer filings offset a drop in business bankruptcies to produce an overall rise.

"With the current financial climate, consumers are giving up."

Elena Jara, Credit Canada

"We find it frightening that the numbers have risen so dramatically, but we're not surprised. We know consumers have been struggling for a long time," said Elena Jara, credit counsellor and education co-ordinator for Credit Canada, a non-profit counselling service.

"With the current financial climate, consumers are giving up and they think that their best option is bankruptcy."

In total, 10,936 personal bankruptcies were filed in April, up 36.1 per cent from the 8,035 in the same month a year earlier.

Business bankruptcies fell 10.6 per cent in April, to 529, compared with Rising loonie a risk, Bank of Canada says

DOLLAR The Bank of Canada held its key interest rate unchanged Thursday at 0.25 per cent, as expected, but sent a shot across the bow of currency markets with unusually strong comments on the threat posed by the sharp appreciation of the Canadian dollar.

The bank said recent significant improvements in financial conditions and commodity prices could be lost if the Canadian dollar — which rose 9.3 per cent against the U.S. dollar in May — continues to increase in value.

"If the unprecedentedly rapid rise in the Canadian dollar (which reflects a combination of higher commodity prices and generalized weakness in the U.S. currency) proves persistent, it could fully offset these positive factors," the bank said.

Generally speaking, special effects and comedy don't mix. There are exceptions to the rule of course (Ghostbusters springs immediately to mind), but normally movies that combine effects and comedy are expensive, unfunny messes.

Land Of The Lost is a prime example. While there are a handful of funny scenes featuring Will Ferrell and Danny McBride, they feel like last minute additions tacked on to an old screenplay based on the mostly forgotten '70s children's show.

Perhaps there is a huge underground cult of hard-core Land Of the Lost fans excited to see Sleestaks on the big screen, but for the most part audiences should react to the film with bewilderment.

Will Ferrell stars as Dr. Rick Marshall, a misunderstood scientist who creates an odd invention that transports himself, a generic love interest (Anna Friel), and a burly tour guide (Danny McBride) to an alternate universe.

Ferrell's character awkwardly transitions from a hilariously pompous scientist (clearly written by the credited SNL writers) to a genius whenever the plot requires.

It's distractingly inconsistent and that sums up the movie as a whole. This is clearly a cheesy adventure screenplay spruced up with a last minute comedy rewrite. The result is a muddled tone that feels like the filmmakers couldn't decide if they were making a family action movie or a crude adolescent comedy.

Whenever a rewritten scene or a Will Ferrell/Danny McBride improv session is woven into the story, the movie works fairly well.

Had this been an adventure/comedy created specifically for the leads, it could have been an entertaining summer movie. Unfortunately, the writers are slaves to a backstory and universe from a cheesy television series that's only on the pop culture radar out of nostalgia and camp value.

Practically every scene inspired by the series grinds the movie to a halt. Despite about 20 to 30 minutes of entertaining material, Land Of The Lost is little more than an expensive waste of talent. Hopefully everyone involved got a big payday to make up for their creative bankruptcy.

Denzel Washington plays a transit worker in the middle of a hostage crisis in Taking of Pelham 1 2 3.

Pelham 1 2 3 'not a remake'

Washington plays average Joe in thriller

Movie feature

NED EHRRAR
Metro World News

Denzel Washington isn't big on labels. For instance, his latest film, The Taking of Pelham 1 2 3, isn't a remake of the 1974 Walter Matthau subway caper.

"I don't think it's a remake. It's a story of a hostage situation on a train in New York City. That's what the two films have in common," Washington insists. "I don't know why anyone would remake a film."

Another label Washington isn't fond of is leading man. In fact, he bristles at the mention of it. "That's something somebody calls you when you're doing press junkets," he insists. "I'm not a leading man; I'm an actor."

And as an actor, what he liked most about Pelham was the chance to play something besides another cop or FBI agent. "I was concerned about Inside Man, where I was a cop and a hostage negotiator," he explains. "I liked the idea that he was an ordinary guy in extraordinary circumstances."

In fact, preparation for playing an average MTA worker was a breeze. "I just ate a lot and kept getting smaller and smaller sweaters," he jokes.

The movie also gave Washington a chance to go head to head with John Travolta — only they initially had to keep their distance from each other. "For the first seven or eight weeks, we didn't shoot any scenes together on-camera, but we were developing a relationship through the microphone," Washington explains.

"It's like an old courtship, over the phone. You get to know a person. We'd sing songs and tell jokes, singing Broadway tunes."

The downside of that setup for Washington was that they filmed his scenes first, giving Travolta a distinct advantage. "He had the luxury of practising because I was on camera first," he says. "He had a chance to work on his part, to develop it."

As a native New Yorker, shooting on the subway was something of a homecoming for Washington, who admits he used to goof off as a kid, sneaking down the tunnels a bit from the platform, but never too far.

But for this film, he got to venture much farther, seeing a side of the city few get a chance to. Though, there's plenty to see on subway itself, as Washington remembers from his youth.

"If you could do it on the subway, I've seen it," he says. "From robbery to parenting."

"For the first seven or eight weeks, we didn't shoot any scenes together on-camera, but we were developing a relationship through the microphone."

Hangover hilarious

The Hangover

Director: Todd Phillips
Stars: Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms
Classification: 14A
Rating: ●●●●●

STEVE GOW
for Metro Canada

If you've ever been nudged awake by a police officer while napping on a stranger's front lawn and couldn't explain how you got there — well, The Hangover may happily make you feel not so alone.

In what is sure to be the summer's biggest surprise comedy, Bradley Cooper (Yes Man) plays a raucous high-school teacher who promises groom Doug (Justin Bartha), dentist Stu (Ed Helms) and weirdo in-law Alan (Zach Galifianakis) their Vegas bachelor party will be a "night the four of us will never forget."

Old School director Todd Phillips delivers another bad-boy comedy in The Hangover.

Only they do forget, and the next morning Stu's bicuspid is not the only thing missing. So is Doug. Setting forth to find the missing groom and deliver him to the altar, the hangover trio must make sense of the tiger in their hotel room, the stolen cop car in their possession and Stu's new stripper-wife (Heather Graham). And that's just the tip of the proverbial iceberg.

The Hangover perhaps most cleverly structures itself as a mystery, slowly revealing the gags in hindsight as the trio tries to solve Doug's disappearance. As such, there's rarely any lag time and the surprises are hugely engaging.

In fact, in spite of the slightly anti-climactic outcome of Doug's great whereabouts, the film redeems itself with a hilarious and slightly shocking end-credit sequence. Most importantly, director Todd Phillips (Old School) delivers the gags with an underlying honesty and captures the natural humour of male behaviour, "stupid" as it sometimes may be. Or at least, that's how the police officer described it to me anyhow.

Nothing seems to gel in Act of God

Act of God

Director: Jennifer Baichwal
Stars: Fred Firth, Paul Auster, Salome Morales
Classification: STC
Rating: ●●●

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

REVIEW Act Of God is the latest movie by Canadian documentary filmmaker Jennifer Baichwal — best known for Manufactured Landscapes, her award-winning study of Edward Burtynsky.

Like all of Baichwal's work, Act Of God is a highly ambitious and willfully ambiguous film. Unfortunately, the subject matter she has chosen this time is just a little too broad for the 75-minute runtime. While there are certainly moments and ideas in the film that are fascinating, none of it really gels together, making the viewing experience a frustrating one.

The final product might not live up to the premise, but Baichwal certainly came up with an intriguing concept for Act Of God. The movie is about the effect that being struck by lightning has on the victims.

The director tracked down a number of fascinating subjects for her film, including a Cuban parade dedicated to the god of lightning, a Mexican woman whose child was killed by lightning, and an interview with author Paul Auster who's lightning experience had a profound impact on his life and work.

Baichwal probes her various subjects to discover how this seemingly random event has shaped their lives and consistently gets some surprisingly spiritual responses.

Comedy left in Ruins

My Life in Ruins

Director: Donald Petrie
Stars: Nia Vardalos, Richard Dreyfuss
Classification: PG
Rating: *

CHRIS ALEXANDER
 for Metro Canada

Even those easily pleased folks who fell arse over tea kettle for Nia Vardalos' breakthrough film My Big Fat Greek Wedding may find their patience tried in My Life in Ruins (also produced by Tom Hanks and his wife, Rita Wilson), the latest attempt by the Winnipeg-born comedian to become Queen of the Mediterranean rom-com.

Vardalos plays Georgia, a neurotic, repressed Greek-American woman who flees to the old country and spends her days working as Greece's dullest tour guide. Resisting sabotage from her smarmy co-worker (Alistair McGowan), our uptight heroine (who by her own admission hasn't had sex in more than a year) must deal with a busload of cliché saddled tourists straight out of the hoariest of fiction.

We have the obnoxious American (fellow Canadian funnyman Harland Williams) and his sniggering wife; the stereotypical Fosters polluted, slang speaking Aussies; the "nice" and timid Canucks; the horny Spanish divorcees, the stuffy Brits and the overbearing, anything-for-a-laugh bachelor (Richard Dreyfuss, miles away from Jaws) who all seem less interested in her love for Greek history and architecture than they do for shopping and getting smashed.

Along the way, Georgia begins a forehead smacking, would-be screwball relationship with her hirsute driver, Poupi Kackas (say it aloud) whose very name exemplifies the kind of low-brow, broad and thoroughly tired humour that director Donald Petrie revels in.

Petrie (Miss Congeniality) is a tried and true Hollywood hack whose comic touch is about as sophisticated as an orangutan in a tuxedo and his ham-handed guidance ensures that every single performance, every weathered gag and dramatic revelation is turned up way past 11.

And that's really too bad, because Vardalos, as she did in her first picture, comes off as rather likeable and the Greek scenery is nothing short of eye filling.

But just in case you think this critic to be waxing hyperbolic at how utterly moronic My Life in Ruins really is, Poupi's nephew is named Doudi. I wish I were kidding.

Elegant, simple Pool a refreshing watch

The Pool

Director: Chris Smith
Stars: Venkatesh Chaven, Nana Patekar
Classification: STC
Rating: ****

CHRIS ALEXANDER
 for Metro Canada

REVIEW After wallowing in an endless miasma of elephantine, over-plotted, big budget blockbuster brain drainers it's a genuine pleasure to stumble across a film like The Pool. Elegant, simple and sharply observed, the picture is the sort of gentle, bittersweet character drama that's come to be dubbed Neo-realist by those in the know; low budget, quasi-documentary movies that enlighten us by telling stories about regular, working class people trying to keep their heads above water in difficult situations.

In the case of the Goa-set picture The Pool, however, our protagonist is actually striving to submerge himself in water. Awkward Vankatesh (newcomer Venkatesh Chaven) spends his days working in a Panjim hotel and, along with his orphaned friend Jhangir, selling plastic shopping bags in the local market.

One day, the two friends spot a wealthy family's luxurious pool through the trees. So smitten with this chlorinated mirage, Vankatesh vows to swim in it no matter what the cost.

As he slowly insinuates himself into the family, his humble dreams become more and more obscured and his fortunes change. Not exactly a synopsis that quickens the pulse, but that's the poetry of The Pool. It's not burdened by twists and turns or gimmicky devices, rather director Chris Smith simply sits back and lets his camera study his characters behaving in their natural environments.

Actors expected to OK deal

A year of labour unrest in Hollywood is seen ending next week when the largest actors' union is expected to approve a new contract with film and TV studios in a close vote, industry watchers said Wednesday.

The Screen Actors Guild, which represents 120,000 actors, remains sharply divided over the labour deal ahead of a June 9 vote count. But many members fear a repeat of the 2007/2008 writers strike

"I think it will be ratified, but I think they (detractors) will be able to drive the (yes vote) percentage down pretty dramatically."

Entertainment attorney Jonathan Handel that cost the Los Angeles area economy as much as $3 billion.

Filmmaking already has slowed this past year as producers worried about starting production then being forced to halt if new labor strife developed. Location movie production in Los Angeles hit a record low in 2009's first quarter, falling 56 per cent from 2008, according to permit issuer Film L.A.

SAG's old labour contract expired on June 30, 2008, although actors are still working under its terms. But now Hollywood wants to get fully back to work and remove any uncertainty over a possible work stoppage, the experts said.

"I think it will be ratified, but I think they (detractors) will be able to drive the (yes vote) percentage down pretty dramatically," Jonathan Handel, an entertainment attorney who has tracked the contract talks.

Sam Freed, a high-ranking member of SAG's national board of directors and a supporter of the contract, said he is optimistic it will win approval.

"It's important that we get this contract signed and we move on," Freed said.

He is part of a moderate SAG faction supporting the deal that calls for a three per cent wage increase this year, 3.5 per cent next year and coverage for work done for the Internet. They say it is the best deal possible in a recession, and further gains can be achieved in 2011 during the next round of labor talks.

But "no" vote hardliners, led by SAG president Alan Rosenberg, say the deal lacks adequate pay for work that goes to the Web and forces actors to give up too many demands.

While he remains hopeful, Rosenberg admits his side has fewer resources than moderates to campaign against the deal.

To convince actors to approve the deal, SAG moderates enlisted Hollywood A-listers Tom Hanks, Sally Field and George Clooney. All those actors have signed a "vote yes" petition.

Hanks appeared in a SAG video saying he supports the deal, "despite the fact that it is not perfect."

Kids' shows in the key of Krofft

InFocus

Richard Crouse

metronews.ca/infocus

Without Sid and Marty Krofft the '60s and '70s would have been much less colorful. The brothers produced trippy Saturday morning kids' shows like Sigmund and the Sea Monsters, Lidsville and H.R. Pufnstuf. They were mind-bending romps with wild fluorescent puppet characters that looked like hip castoffs from McDonald's-land and a psychedelic sensibility that had more to do with Reefer Madness than Captain Kangaroo.

Not that I knew that at the time. Later when I realized H.R.'s surname was pronounced "puffin' stuff" the hallucinogenic humor of the show made (slightly) more sense.

The Kroffts were best known for their insane puppet shows, but among their other credits were fantasy series like Land of the Lost, which gets the big screen treatment this weekend. If it's a hit expect more shows from the Krofft vault to make the leap to theatres.

"I think a number of our titles are conducive to film," says younger brother Marty. "Like Lidsville, Electra Woman and Dyna Girl; I know there is a big star that wants to be Electra Woman."

This isn't the first time the Kroffts have dabbled in film. In 1970 the brothers produced a theatrical version of the H.R. Pufnstuf television show. Simply titled Pufnstuf, it centred around Jimmy (Jack Wild), his magical talking flute, Freddy, and Jimmy's old foe Witchiepoo (Billie Hayes) who tries to steal the flute and win the Witch of the Year Award. It's not Dostoevsky, but Witchiepoo and her Vroom Broom is worth a search on YouTube. (If they bring Pufnstuf back to the big screen Marty already knows who he wants to play Witchiepoo. "How great would Johnny Depp be as Witchiepoo?" he says.)

If Pufnstuf was Cheech

In 1970 the Krofft brothers produced a theatrical version of their H.R. Pufnstuf television show.

and Chong for kids their next movie was John Waters-lite.

Shot in 1978, Side Show is a demented little flick that didn't see the light of day until 1981. Directed by William Canon Conrad this strange piece of celluloid is a murder mystery set against the backdrop of a circus.

The Kroffts and Conrad almost outdo Tod Browning's Freaks, bringing together a collection of actual side show performers to add a sense of eccentric authenticity to the picture.

Side Show was a flop, but that didn't slow down the brothers. They have been producing television and movies for almost five decades with no end in sight. As Disney chief Michael Eisner said, "The Kroffts always have one more show in them."

Richard Crouse's Movie Show can be seen every Sunday at 6:30 p.m. on the E! Channel; mrchaos33@hotmail.com.

Nombre visceral ride

Sin Nombre

Director: Cary Fukunaga

Stars: Paulian Gaitan, Edgar Flores

Classification: 14A

Rating: ****

IAN GORMELY
for Metro Canada

It often takes an outside perspective to accurately reflect another culture. The English proved that when they took American rhythm and blues and sold it back to the States as the Beatles and the Rolling Stones.

In the case of Sin Nombre, the debut feature from director Cary Fukunaga, it's taken the son of a Swedish mother and a Japanese father who was born in Oakland to create a modern day Mexican gangster story.

Willy is a mid-ranking member of the Mara Salvatrucha gang where he's known as El Casper. However his secret relationship with Martha Marlene, a girl outside the gang leaves him in dereliction of his duties. Unaware of how dangerous the Mara Salvatrucha are, Martha Marlene drops by one of their meetings looking for Willy but is accidentally killed by Lil Mago after he tries to rape her.

Reeling from Martha

A scene from Sin Nombre, a modern day Mexican gangster story.

Marlene's death and in hot water for skipping out on and lying to the gang, Willy is placed under tight supervision as he and Lil Mago board a train and rob the people riding on top headed to the U.S.-Mexico border.

Willy's anger swells when Lil Mago attempts to rape a young girl named Sayra traveling with her father and uncle. Willy lashes out and kills him, frightening everyone aboard. Now faced with former friends out for his head, Willy tries to redeem himself by helping Sayra and her family cross the border.

The film is a twist the traditional western themes of revenge and redemption. Fukunaga creates an astounding sense of authenticity buoyed by the level of detail he pours in to both the gang and immigrants. While Sayra's troubles with her estranged father are left frustratingly murky, it doesn't distract from the film's tone or momentum.

The director's decision to use subtitles also adds to viewers' immersion into this heretofore-unseen world. Sin Nombre is an incredibly visceral experience, exposing the grit and grime of both the Mexican gang and immigrant experience.

English Surgeon deeply moving

The English Surgeon

Director: Geoffrey Smith

Classification: STC

Rating: ****

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Dr. Henry Marsh is the subject of the documentary The English Surgeon.

REVIEW The quality of mercy should never be strained and Dr. Henry Marsh for one, certainly lives by this creed. The gentle, unassuming MD is the subject of Geoffrey Smith's haunting documentary The English Surgeon, a picture that manages to milk optimism out of poverty, terminal illness and death.

The film follows Marsh as he travels to the Ukraine to assist his friend and colleague Dr. Igor Kurilets treat the sick under the most stressful and dispiriting of conditions. One patient in particular, Marian, a West Ukraine man, who is afflicted with a deadly brain tumour, gets special attention.

Scene after scene of queasy, bloody operating room footage (Marian is still awake when Marsh opens his skull) is juxtaposed with heartbreaking passages of the potentially doomed man just surviving in his environment.

The heart and soul of

The English Surgeon is obviously Marsh himself, whose tireless dedication to both saving lives and providing palliative humanity makes him nothing short of compelling. But what makes the movie so gripping on a technical level is its unique cinematic quality, which is as much a result of Smith's meticulous craft (and brilliant editing) as it is the fragile, gorgeous score.

Composed by cult rocker Nick Cave and his Bad Seeds partner Warren Ellis (The Assassination of Jesse James...), the violin and piano drenched music adds an ache, a melancholy and a haunting depth that glues the picture together and focuses it.

The English Surgeon will no doubt get lost in the summer blockbuster shuffle but is an excellent, deeply moving film.

REVIEW In his first major starring role outside the High School Musical franchise, Zac Efron is looking to prove that he's more than just a pretty face, that he can carry a movie. And he very well might be able to, if the movie in question didn't spend so much time trying to make that point. There's a certain "Hey look, he's doing it!" aspect to 17 Again that can get in the way of the movie itself. 17 Again follows Mike O'Donnell (played as an adult by Matthew Perry), who, through a bit of hocus pocus, is transformed back to his 17-year-old self (Efron), only it's still present day, so suddenly he's going to high school with his teenage children.

Dance Flick

REVIEW You have to worry about a movie that begins with a thug in a dance-battle showing off by shoving his head up his own behind. Surprisingly in Dance Flick, that leading gag is actually deceptive. The latest offering in the oversaturated market of spoof-comedies (a la Epic Movie, Date Movie, etc.), Dance Flick definitely has plenty of crass material about obesity and flatulence but it also rises to the monumental challenge of trying to scrape something original out of a horribly-flogged dead horse.

Monsters vs. Aliens

Night at the Museum 2: Battle of the Smithsonian

REVIEW In 2006's Night at the Museum, technology allowed Ben Stiller to realistically wrestle all sorts of taxidermy in New York's Museum of Natural History. Now in Battle of the Smithsonian, Stiller goes to Washington D.C. and pretty much does the same thing. Well, almost. He may have gone from security guard to shilling dodgy products (like the unloseable key ring) on TV, but Larry Daley (Stiller) is still drawn back to the museum only to discover his nocturnal pals being carted off to the Smithsonian for storage.

Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Obsessed

REVIEW For a movie that's being marketed as "this year's sexiest thriller," Obsessed certainly lacks some key components. Like sex and thrills for starters. In fact, motivated characters, a sharper script and a consistent tone wouldn't have hurt the value of this so-called thriller either. In the neutered Fatal Attraction wannabe, Idris Elba (RocknRolla) plays Derek Charles, a successful executive who suddenly finds himself the mark of an attractive office temp named Lisa (Ali Larter).

Steve Gow/Metro Canada

Star Trek

REVIEW In what could easily have been Star Trek: The College Years, the film brings together the crew of the USS Enterprise for their maiden voyage to do battle with a black hole-building Romulan with a chip on his shoulder (Eric Bana, with Mike Tyson-like face tattoos). In the midst of the crisis, the filmmakers reinvigorate well-worn heroes Kirk (Chris Pine) and Spock (Zachary Quinto) by sprinkling on liberal amounts of daddy issues.

Ned Ehrbar/Metro Canada

Terminator Salvation

REVIEW In this unwanted and perfunctory prequel/sequel slog, the robot apocalypse's chief adversary, resistance leader John Connor (Christian Bale) is trying to find his would-be teenage father Kyle Reese (Anton Yelchin) before the evil cybernetic empire called Skynet erases him, thus eliminating Connor's existence. Confused? Not as confused as supposedly executed death row prisoner Marcus Wright (Sam Worthington) who literally wakes up after a nuclear blast and spends much of the movie's running time stumbling about the desert evading android annihilation.

Chris Alexander/Metro Canada

X-Men Origins: Wolverine

REVIEW Leading the charge in three popular X-Men movies turned Wolverine (and actor Hugh Jackman) into one of Hollywood's most alluring big-screen superheroes. Now, with his origin on-screen for all to see, a mostly uninspired movie may nullify the mutant's mystique. In fact, although Wolverine is jam-packed with action and eye-catching special effects, at 108 minutes, it may actually suffer from its own succinctness.

Trucks carves out legacy

Allman Brothers Band guitarist makes mark with his own band

GRAHAM ROCKINGHAM
for Metro Canada

As part of the Allman Brothers Band, Derek Trucks spends a great deal of his time trying to live up to the legacy of guitar god Duane Allman.

It's a task that could drive a lesser guitarist mad. Since dying in a motorcycle accident 38 years ago at the age of 24, Allman has achieved legendary status. His shoes are not the easiest to step into. But over the past ten years, Trucks has taken up the challenge with a brilliance that has gained him acceptance among the Allmans' notoriously demanding fans as well as respect from his better-known peers.

At the relatively young age of 29, Trucks is widely acknowledged as one of the world's great practitioners of electric slide guitar, an able successor to Allman and a remarkable stylist in his own right.

So despite all the satisfaction he gets playing with the Allmans, it's nice to ease himself out of that pressure cooker and into the comfort of his own solo project, The Derek Trucks Band.

"It's like the difference between driving a Mac truck and a sports car," laughs Trucks.

He was talking on the phone from New York's Beacon Theatre, where the Allmans recently completed a string of 15 sold-out concerts to celebrate the great band's 40th anniversary. During those shows, the Allmans were joined by a stunning array of guest artists, including Eric Clapton, Buddy Guy, Levon Helm (The Band), Los Lobos, Trey Anastasio (Phish), Phil Lesh and Bob Weir (the Grateful Dead), John Hammond and Sheryl Crow. Even then, Trucks found it necessary to take a break and jam out with his own band.

"My band played a show on the last night off, the Wednesday night, down in Jersey and that was such a breath of fresh air," Trucks says. "I felt like we had so much more control of the direction, just like on the drop of a hat. It was really nice ... The Allman Brothers run has been amazing but, I was actually surprised at how much I enjoyed being with my guys for the one gig we did. I think it made me play better with the Allmans the next night. They kind of re-fuel each other."

Trucks, a native of Jacksonville, Fla., comes by his talents naturally. As nephew to Allmans' drummer Butch Trucks, he grew up with the band's music. His father even named him out of respect for Derek and the Dominoes, the early '70s band that paired Clapton with Duane Allman.

When Clapton asked Trucks to join his band for a tour two years ago, he eagerly took up the challenge. One of the things Trucks most remembers about that tour was when he brought his father to Clapton's English estate to meet his idol.

"He invited me and my family out to his place outside of London, the place in the country that he's had for 40 years," Trucks says. "My dad is a roofer from Jacksonville who named his son off that record. Watching him have afternoon tea with Eric was surreal."

Grand Analog turns up the heat

If there's any CD title that doesn't need artwork, it's Grand Analog's latest, Metropolis is Burning. The Winnipeg-turned-Toronto group may have come up with one of the most vivid album names — and that was the point.

"Man, do I love the term burning," says Odario Williams, as he chows down a steak sandwich at a Toronto pub. "Partly because of it's reggae connotations — them reggae cats want to burn everything — and if anything should be burning, it's metropolis."

Still, despite the fiery visions the name conjures up, Williams won't disclose exactly what he was thinking when he came up with the title — "I wanted something that could be left to interpretation," he says — though he does admit that his sophomore album, and his first disc, Calligraffiti, are about cities.

And, if this hip-hop artist knows anything, it's what makes different towns tick. Williams grew up in Winnipeg and made a name from himself under the moniker Mood Ruff. He came to Toronto five years ago in the hopes of playing some music, though he launched Grand Analog as an experiment. Soon enough he became a staple of the Toronto hip-hop scene.

But this isn't just a tale of two cities; he's also toured Canada numerous times, spending time in Canadian locales big and small. "Cities have a character to them, a personality," he says. "It usually takes leaving to really get it. Whenever I go to the next city, I think about the one I left."

Like the complex makeup of his various Metropolises, Williams' music is a dense mixture of sounds and genres. Take it Slow melds reggae, some electro and dub, Magnifico, with its distorted riffs and funk groove, recalls Lenny Kravitz, while others throw in some jazz and melodic hip-hop beats into the mix.

Williams likes to think the world is ready for genre-bending artists, though on his MySpace page he called out people who were upset that a rap track from his hip-hop cohort Shad was an iTunes song of the week.

"That's the high school way of thinking. I'm prep so this what I listen to, I'm goth so this is what I listen to," he says. "The goth kids can't confess that there's a hip-hop song they actually like. We're still in a world where everything is compartmentalized. You go to a record store and everything is in its section. Rap? I'm going to categorize that under 50 Cent. If it doesn't sound like that people are off balance."

"But there's more and more acceptance for people who are outside of that box," he adds. "It used to be uncool to be alternative of anything. Now it's not like that."

Music

Cui Jian, the father of Chinese rock

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

In 2006, I took a long, slow walk around Tiananmen Square, trying to imagine the horrors faced by the untold hundreds (thousands?) of student protestors who were massacred by the army that was supposed to protect them in June 1989.

I knew this: Before the tanks rolled in, there was music. Much of it was from Cui Jian, one of the very first Chinese rock stars. Taking cues from records by the Beatles, the Stones and the Talking Heads smuggled in from Bangkok and Hong Kong, he started writing music. In 1986, he released his first album, Rock and Roll and the New Long March. It eventually established him as the Father of Chinese Rock and even "the Bruce Springsteen of modern China."

The comparison isn't inaccurate. By 1989, his biggest song was Nothing to My Name which resonated the same way Born to Run did. The narrator of the song pleas with a girl to go with him, but she scorns him for being poor. Although it works as a typical boy-girl love song, it was also seen metaphorically as a very political song, extolling anti-socialist concepts such as individualism. Others interpreted it as a dialogue with China itself. A rock song said things that could never, ever be expressed in public.

By the time students began occupying the square that spring, Nothing to My Name had been adopted as their anthem. Cui was flattered and inspired by the risks the protestors were taking so he, sporting a John Lennon-like haircut, often showed up to talk and occasionally sing with the students. No wonder he was embraced by some of the prominent leaders of the movement.

Then came June 4, 1989. Cui and other rock musicians were forced to hide out in the provinces for almost a year. Even after it was safe to come back to Beijing, playing gigs were risky for the next ten years. It wasn't until he was able to play a show in Capital Stadium in September 2005 that Beijing's unofficial ban on his music came to an end.

During my visit to Tiananmen Square in March 2006, Rolling Stone published its first Chinese edition. The guy on the cover? Cui Jian. This was also the last Chinese Rolling Stone. Within a week, its publishing licence was taken away by the government. Coincidence?

Paris' Middle Eastern BFF

Celebrity heiress Paris Hilton is bringing her reality show search for a new best friend to Dubai, where her hard-partying style will be reined in a notch to accommodate Middle East sensibilities, the production company behind the series said this week.

Production on the latest version of Paris Hilton's My New BFF will begin later this month in Dubai and take 17 days, Ish Entertainment said.

As in the U.S. and British versions of the program, the show will revolve around a group of contestants trying to win Hilton's affection and the title of her "best friend forever," or "BFF" to use text-messaging lingo.

"We're very aware we are not making the same show we would make in Los Angeles," said Ish co-founder Michael Hirschorn.

Despite the high alcohol content often found in similar reality shows, Hirschorn said that to respect the local mores of Dubai, alcohol may be nixed from the program.

He added that the idea for the show intrigued him.

"I was excited about the sheer, 'Oh my God, what's going to happen' factor," Hirschorn said.

Lions Gate Entertainment Corp will distribute the show internationally, and the program will likely air in Arab countries and possibly in the U.S. on cable channel MTV or on the TV Guide Network, which is owned by Lions Gate.

No air date has been set for the show starring Hilton, who has never before been to Dubai.

Hilton, 28, is the daughter of Rick and Kathy Hilton of the Hilton hotel family, and is a favorite of the paparazzi everywhere. Her show Paris Hilton's My New BFF began last year on MTV and was soon followed by a British version.

Miley clothing line at Wal-Mart

FASHION Major retailer Wal-Mart unveiled plans Wednesday to launch a fashion line with Miley Cyrus, linking itself to a top teenage pop star at about the time back-to-school shopping begins.

Cyrus, the star of the hit Disney Channel series Hannah Montana, will team with designer Max Azria, of BCBGMAXAZRIA, to create a line of budget-friendly items: graphic tees, tops, pants, shoes and accessories, all under $20.

In a statement, Wal-Mart said the line will reflect the rock 'n' roll roots of 16-year-old Cyrus, who has scored musical hits with her Hannah Montana albums and enjoyed strong success at film box offices with her Hannah Montana: The Movie.

Carradine found dead

American actor David Carradine was found dead, naked and hanging from a rope in the closet of his luxury Bangkok hotel room Thursday, Thai police said. He was 72.

Police said they were alerted to the death of the actor, who won fame as the wandering monk in the Kung Fu television series, Thursday morning.

"He was found hanging by a rope in the room's closet," Lt.-Col. Pirom Jantirapirom of the Lumpini police station in Bangkok told Reuters.

Carradine's body was naked when it was found and there were no signs of other people in the room, Pirom said. The body has been sent to a hospital for an autopsy.

Lori Binder, a representative for Carradine's Los Angeles-based talent manager, said the actor was in Thailand to shoot a film called Stretch.

Carradine, from a family of performers and the eldest son of well-known character actor John Carradine, enjoyed a long career on Broadway, television and in movies such as Kill Bill.

Examining Media Issues

InDepth

Foreign Aid: Experts from around the world debated whether foreign aid results in more harm than good in developing countries during the latest Munk Debate in Toronto this week. Here are some suggestions to learn more about the issue:

• PANELISTS AND THEIR BOOKS: The two panelists arguing aid causes more harm than good were Zambian-born author Dambisa Moyo, whose book Dead Aid argues that government aid does not help Africa, despite $1 trillion being poured into the content over the last four decades. Her debating partner was Hernando de Soto, president of Peru's Institute for Liberty and Democracy and author of The Mystery of Capital: Why Capitalism Triumphs in the West and Fails Everywhere Else. Arguing for aid were Paul Collier, an Oxford economics professor and author of the award-winning The Bottom Dollar: Why the Poorest Countries are Failing and What Can Be Done About It and Stephen Lewis, former UN Special envoy for HIV/AIDS in Africa, and a professor of global health at McMaster University, and author of Race Against Time. • MOVIES: One concern raised about foreign aid during the debate was the support it can provide to dictators and tyrants. This has been a popular theme in movies recently, with political corruption acting as main character in The Constant Gardener, based on John Le Carré's novel of the same name, the United Nations-set thriller The Interpreter with Nicole Kidman, and Blood Diamond with Leonardo DiCaprio. • MUSIC The fight for foreign aid has been a popular cause celeb for a number of years, from the British and Irish charity group Band Aid, which raised money for famine relief in Ethiopia, and 2004's Band Aid 20 collaboration. Of course, there was also the song We Are The World, and the Live Aid events held in 1985 and 2005 to also raise money and awareness for aid relief efforts. Most of these endeavours are available online, and in compilation CDs and DVDs

Britney's tumultuous childhood

GROWING UP Britney Spears' uncle claims she grew up in a violent household, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

The singer — who famously shaved her head and spent time in rehab following a breakdown — reportedly witnessed her father Jamie Spears regularly flying into drunken rages at their family home when she was a small child.

Her uncle Willie Spears — who is Jamie's brother — revealed in Steve Dennis' new book Britney: Inside the Dream: "I was at the house and Jamie walked in drunk and called Lynne a bad name. She was in the kitchen drinking water and he grabbed the glass, walked into the lounge and just hurled it. It was rough, but the sad thing is that it became normal life."

Lynne filed for divorce from Jamie in 1980, the year before Britney was conceived, after he allegedly cheated on her. Lynne sought a restraining order, fearing divorce proceedings would spark his temper. However, the pair did not legally separate until 2000.

Willie says the erratic behaviour of his brother — who sought treatment for his problems with alcohol in 2004 — became a "normal" part of his niece's childhood.

He continued: "One time Jamie was drunk and tried to drive off with Britney in the car. She was no more than five years old. I tried to stop him, so I reached into the truck to grab the keys from the ignition and he punched me. We got right into it there by the car, fighting in front of her."

"Britney was jumping up and down, crying. Lynne had to run out to get her inside. We Spears men are known for fighting. If Britney happened to be there, so be it." METRO NEWS SERVICES

Ashlee's jealous side

DESPERATE HOUSEWIFE A run-in with husband Pete Wentz's ex put Ashlee Simpson in a foul mood at a party the other night. After being seated near actress Michelle Trachtenberg, Simpson reportedly proceeded to get drunk and behave inappropriately, hurling insults and giving her husband a lap dance while staring directly at Trachtenberg, according to Page Six.

"She was grinding up on Pete like a stripper. It was actually pretty disgusting," a source said. Simpson's rep would only say, "It was just a misunderstanding. Ashlee has since apologized to Michelle and they remain on good terms."

Oprah defends health advice on show

UNDER FIRE Oprah Winfrey spoke out about Newsweek's latest cover story, which claims that she abuses her influence and credibility by promoting health "cures" that are ineffective and dangerous, us-magazine.com reports.

Among the Winfrey guests who have offered questionable medical advice: Suzanne Somers told

Winfrey she swallows 60 supplements every day and takes a variety of bioidentical hormones to fight aging; physician/author

Christiane

Northrup, who told Oprah viewers that "in many women, thyroid dysfunction develops because of an energy blockage in the throat region, the result of a lifetime of 'swallowing' words one is aching to say."

Winfrey insists she is only trying to open dialogue between viewers and their doctors. Winfrey said in a statement. "I trust the viewers, and I know that they are smart and discerning enough to seek out medical opinions to determine what may be best for them."

But some Winfrey viewers say Oprah's information isn't all helpful.

Living Oprah, a blogger who spent a year following

Oprah's advice, said some of it "conflicted with my own doctor's guidance. My doc always shrugged at how many supplements I knocked back in 2008."

Biologist PZ Myers, an associate professor at the University of Minnesota, also blogged: "It's about time one of the big media players pointed out that she is promoting dangerous fake therapies ... all with a happy smile, of course, and a message of positive self-esteem for women. It's still credulous glop, though."

Secret weapon: Baby wipes

PARENTING TIP Busy father of six Brad Pitt has figured out the secret to hygiene on the go. "He shared that when you're sweating and don't have time to take a shower, you just take a baby wipe and rub it under your armpits," Eli Roth, Pitt's co-star in the upcoming Inglorious Basterds, told People magazine.

"I thought it was the greatest tip," Roth admits.

Dogs are Jon's best friends

IT'S LONELY AT THE TOP As the paparazzi continue to hound the troubled Gosselins, Jon knows he can count on man's best friend to watch his back, people.com reports.

"The people outside my house, I can't control that. But in all the pictures, my lovely puppies sit out there," said Jon Gosselin, star of Jon & Kate Plus 8, of his German shepherd puppies named Shoka and Nala.

People.com says caring for the dogs has been a welcome distraction for Jon, who sparked controversy after he was spotted leaving a bar with a woman.

In addition to caring for his eight-year-old twins and five-year-old sextuplets, he's also in charge of the dogs. But since they're pups, they're still doing things they shouldn't.

"There is no corner of my wood-framed house that has not been gnawed off and either replaced by my contractor or is ready to be replaced," he said.

Jonas mom prays sons keep purity

MOTHERLY LOVE The mother of the Jonas Brothers hopes and prays that her sons, who wear purity rings, remain virgins until they're married. But she knows it's a tough world out there for young stars.

"They are men. They have desires. They have testosterone," Denise Jonas says, according to Hollyscoop. "If they make a mistake, I'm not going to hate them. I don't think they are above or below being seduced. I would be foolish if I thought that. I pray for them."

Metro Recipe of the Day

Spiced Pork with Sweet Potatoes

INGREDIENTS:

- 1 tbsp (15 ml) canola oil
- 4 boneless pork loin chops, trimmed of fat
- 1 red onion, coarsely chopped
- 2 celery stalks, chopped
- 1 large sweet potato, peeled and cut into sticks
- 2/3 cup (150 ml) cranberry juice
- 2/3 cup (150 ml) chicken stock
- 1 piece preserved ginger, drained and cut into fine sticks
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) thick-cut orange marmalade
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) dry sherry
- 1 tsp (5 ml) Chinese five-spice powder
- 2 star anise
- 4 plum tomatoes, quartered lengthwise
- Salt and fresh-ground black pepper
- 3 scallions, shredded

METHOD:

- Heat oil in large Dutch oven over medium heat. Add pork chops and brown, 3 to 4 minutes per

- side; transfer to plate and set aside.
- Add onion and celery to oil remaining in Dutch oven and sauté 2 to 3 minutes. Add sweet potato, cover pan, and sweat vegetables until soft, 3 to 4 minutes.
- Stir in cranberry juice, stock, ginger, marmalade, star anise and a little salt and pepper; bring to boil. Reduce heat and return pork to Dutch oven. Cover and simmer 15 minutes.
- Add tomatoes, re-cover Dutch oven, and simmer until tomatoes are lightly cooked, but still hold their shape, about 5 minutes. Taste and add more salt and pepper, if necessary. Serve garnished with scallions.
